

PENNSYLVANIA

Pennsylvania had a changing relationship with the natives. When Penn started Pennsylvania he wrote a treaty with them. This held until his death because his brothers and sons didn't like the natives as much. At that point the Pennsylvanian farmers pushed out into the Lenni-Lenape territory and caused a war. The native people had a big part in the history of Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania was an interesting middle colony. The colony started in 1681. Pennsylvania was very good for growing corn, flax, rye, and wheat. They produced glass, iron, and rope. Pennsylvanians could trade all of these plus lumber with other places. Pennsylvania had a successful economy.

The people in the Pennsylvania colony did many things. The men went to work and then helped with the farm they also built houses. The kids went to school and then helped their fathers. The women churned butter, washed clothes and spun wool. The slaves worked the fields all day. The people worked very hard.
